Full job description

Company Description

Your new opportunity at Nine.

At Nine's Security Operation Centre, our mission is "Stopping Breaches". This is our highest priority and every capability that we develop and are responsible for somehow contributes to this mission. We deal with successful and failed intrusions, insider error or malice, nation backed or financially motivated campaigns on a daily basis. We are laser focused on doing everything we can to detect, contain and (help the business to) recover from these attacks. We leverage automation and open and closed source data to detect intrusions and proactively develop actionable intelligence to help the business prioritise risks and mitigate against imminent threats.

As the Cyber Security Analyst your role will focus on picking up, reviewing and investigating alerts to determine what needs to be escalated. Due to the small size of the team, you will get exposure to all aspects of security operations.

We are currently adding a lot of products and services to deliver cyber controls and uplifts, and you will get the chance to be part of something that is growing and building in a really exciting way. We are always looking towards the most cutting edge tools and technologies, and are not afraid to bend the rules and try new things.

Job Description

Day to day you will be involved in:

- Investigation and analysis of alerts, advisories and incidents
- Attack surface mapping, critical vulnerability triage and impact analysis
- Curation, enrichment and correlation of indicators, creating actionable intel and managing their lifecycle
- Detection engineering, development and improvement of detection signature base across the SOC toolset

- Data and attack based threat hunting
- Reporting on threat intel, metrics and publishing internal advisories
- Automation of investigation, incident response and threat intel workflows
- Security Operations tooling management, configuration and operations

You will also be required to participate on a rotational on call roster (24x7, once every 3 weeks)

Qualifications

Enough about us, let's talk about you.

This is a great opportunity for someone relatively new to Cyber Security, with entry level exposure to Security Engineering. We will get you involved in a wide variety of cyber transformational work, training and upskilling.

This role will be a great fit for someone with an 'analyst mindset' who wants to be actively involved in threat hunting, threat intelligence management and investigations. You'll need a high degree of tenacity and curiosity to wade through the copious amounts of information available to you in order to connect the dots. You will be flexible, persistent and always willing to learn.

What we would like to see on your resume:

- Some experience and/or exposure to a Security Operations Centre
- The ability to make and communicate decisions through the robust analysis of data
- SIEM (security, information, and event management) platform management experience
- Exposure to technical report writing
- Experience with client service and management
- Scripting, automation and basic networking knowledge
- Web application vulnerability assessment experience
- A Degree in Information Security, Information Protection, Computer Information Systems, Computer Science, Computer Engineering, or Information Systems Management would be beneficial, but is not essential
- Industry certification is also desirable (e.g. OSCP, Security+, GSEC), but not essential
